

A summary is a text that is produced from one or more texts, that conveys important information in the original text, containing a significant portion of the information from the original text(s), and that is no longer than half of the original text. The goal of automatic text summarization is presenting the source text into a shorter version with meaningful semantics. The most important advantage of using a summary is it reduces the reading time. Summarization process involves interpretation, transformation and generation.